

Course Title: N 395 Community and Global Health

Course Description:

This course applies concepts of community health and public health to both individual and family health promotion cases. Students will discuss disease prevention in the context of emerging community and global diseases. Students will also address principles of population health and epidemiology.

Course Objectives:

At the end of this course, the student will be able to:

1. Examine the historical highlights in public and community health.
2. Discuss the use of technology to help make decisions and improve the status of the individual, family, and community at the local and global levels.
3. Demonstrate knowledge of the assumptions underlying traditional and holistic.
4. Views of health, healing, and conducting patient assessment.
5. Examine the relationship between nurses in communities with other core components of